

Coastal Commission denies project appeals

Kevin L. Hoover
MAD RIVER UNION
ARCATA/BAYSIDE
— The California Coastal Commission last week turned aside two challenges to the Old Arcata Road Rehabilitation and Pedestrian/Bikeway Improvements project's Coastal Development Permits (CDPs). In both cases, the commission accepted staff recommendations that "No Substantial Issue" was involved. Intended to improve traffic flow and user safety, the project involves repaving Old Arcata Road, enhancing bicycle lanes, improving and extending an existing walkway, improving sidewalks, crosswalks and speed humps plus drainage improvements and a new roundabout at Old Arcata Road and Jacoby Creek Road. Two appeals were filed. One, by Bayside Cares and Bayside resident Marc Delany, challenged the City of Arcata's CDP; the

HUMBOLDT — A dog attack in Trinidad back in October is getting national attention — attention that may complicate things for a non-profit organization attempting to provide service animals for people that suffer from autism, traumatic brain injuries and PTSD.

On Nov. 14, the New York Post ran a story titled "Pack of 10 poodles attacks California beachgoer and her elderly corgi service dog" that references the Nov. 10 article, "Pack of 10 frenzied poodles swarms Trinidad beachgoers" by Jack Durham for the Mad River Union.

The articles share a Trinidad woman's terrifying experience at a local beach when her semi-retired corgi, Emma, was attacked, leaving the elderly dog in serious condition needing two surgeries.

On October 29, Kathrin Bursleson was walking her dog Emma near the beach with her friend. She said she avoided the more populated areas of the beach and trails due to the growing number of people with unleashed pets.

Rabies common among foxes, skunks and bats – reduce your exposure risk

HUMBOLDT DHHS
MANILA – A resident in the Manila area was bitten by a fox over the weekend, almost a month after a similar incident in the same area involving a fox that later tested positive for rabies.
The fox in the most recent incident has not been caught and its rabies status cannot be confirmed.
The bite victim is currently undergoing treatment for possible rabies exposure.
Since this report, Humboldt County Department of Health & Human Services Division of Environmental Health (DEH) has received several additional reports of foxes acting aggressively in the area by the north end of the Mal'el Dunes.
Local health officials are urging caution to people in the area between Manila and Mad River Beach. Anyone who sees an animal acting strangely should contact DEH which is monitoring reports in that area.
Benjamin Dolf, DEH supervising environmental health specialist, said generally it is important to use caution around wild animals, and if you encounter an animal that is sick, injured or docile, do not try to approach it, help it or try to nurse it back to health.

Rabies is always present in the wildlife population throughout Humboldt County, especially foxes, skunks and bats.
People who come across sick or injured animals can contact the Humboldt Wildlife Care Center which has staff who are trained to respond.
Preventive measures against the spread of rabies in Humboldt County include avoiding contact with wild and stray animals, bringing pet food indoors at night and reporting animal bites to your county or municipal animal control officer.
If you are bitten, wash the bite(s) immediately with soap and water and go to the emergency department to seek medical treatment. It is critical that anyone potentially exposed to rabies be treated within 24 hours, and sooner is better.
Public Health officials stress the importance of fully vaccinating domestic animals against rabies, including dogs, cats and select livestock.
For questions about rabies or to report a rabid or suspected rabid animal, call DEH at (707) 445-6215 or toll free at 1-800-963-9241.
To report a sick or injured animal, contact the Humboldt Wildlife Care Center at (707) 822-8839.

Time to take 'Tridemic' precautions

HUMBOLDT DHHS
HUMBOLDT – Health officials are urging community residents to take precautions this season after the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) reported an increase in COVID-19 cases and earlier-than-expected flu activity and respiratory syncytial virus (RSV) cases across the state and country.
The "Tridemic," as some have labeled it, is fueling increases in rates of reported respiratory illnesses nationwide.
Anyone can contract any of these respiratory illnesses, but those most at risk of developing severe complications from influenza, COVID-19 and RSV tend to be young children and infants, and adults aged 65 and older, as well as individuals with compromised immune systems.
Humboldt County Health Officer Dr. Candy Stockton said, "Because there is currently no vaccine for RSV, and because getting RSV and flu or COVID at the same time is especially dangerous for young children, it's really important that we all do our part to help protect our kids by making sure we are up to date on both our flu and COVID vaccines this year."
Respiratory illnesses like flu, COVID-19 and RSV can be prevented with good respiratory hygiene, including regular hand washing, avoiding close contact with individuals experiencing cold or flu-like symptoms, covering coughs and sneezes with a tissue or shirt sleeve, and disinfecting high-touch surfaces. Masking is also an effective countermeasure, with N95 or KN95 respirators providing the highest degree of protection. As with COVID-19, babies and toddlers under 2 years old should not wear a mask.
Following these tips as well as getting a seasonal flu vaccine and keeping up to date on COVID-19 vaccinations and boosters are important measures in keeping yourself and those around you safe.
To schedule a flu shot, contact your local pharmacy or primary care provider. To schedule a COVID-19 vaccine or bivalent booster, visit MyTurn.ca.gov.

A community welfare film has been obtained by the Arcata Chamber of Commerce and is being run nightly during the holiday season at the Minor Theater. It is 110 feet long and contains and well lettered and grouped paragraphs the following New Year's pledge: "I shall speak well because I think well of Arcata. I shall support those things which enhance, and oppose those things which injure the good reputation of Arcata. I shall welcome the newcomer to Arcata. I shall do what I can to ensure a happy and prosperous expanding future for Arcata. And, lastly, I shall welcome the adoption here of all methods and measures that have proven beneficial elsewhere as I believe that the best is none too good for Arcata." Its reception by the theater audience has been enthusiastic.

How we, a greasy people, can lessen the costly consequences of our lardly ways on the sewerage

CITY OF ARCATA

ARCATA – The Environmental Services Department encourages residents to properly dispose of cooking grease this holiday season and all year long.

Many people celebrate the holidays by preparing traditional feasts including turkey, ham, gravy, stuffing and desserts.

As delicious as these foods may be, they are prepared with fats, oils, butter and grease which can wreak havoc on drains and the city's wastewater system if not disposed of properly.

When residents pour fats, oils or grease down a sink or toilet, it increases the chances for clogged drains resulting in costly plumbing problems or sanitary sewer overflows. Sanitary sewer overflows are a public health concern and can cause serious environmental issues.

The Environmental Services Department has some helpful tips for all community members to help avoid clogging sewer drains with holiday fats, oils and grease:

- Avoid pouring cooking grease down the sink or toilet.
- Do not place food that contains fat, oil or grease into the garbage disposal.
- Wipe greasy dishes and pots with a paper towel or napkin to absorb cooking oil before washing them in the sink.
- Scrape vegetable scraps from dishes for composting and scrape greasy food residue into the garbage prior to washing dishes in the sink.

- Cooled and solidified cooking grease or oil should be placed in a sealed container and stored in the freezer until it has hardened, and then, put in a solid waste garbage bin. Alternatively, pour fats and oils into cat litter until it is absorbed and dispose the litter into the trash.

To report sanitary sewer overflows and for more information regarding fat, oil and grease disposal and proper disposal of Household Hazardous Waste, please call the Environmental Services Department at (707) 822-8184 or email eservices@cityofarcata.org.

Easy ways to reduce food waste during the holidays

CITY OF ARCATA

ARCATA – This holiday season everyone can make a difference by reducing food waste which helps save money, feed the hungry and protect the environment.

Food waste is a major problem affecting our community and the environment. According to the Environmental Protection Agency, almost 63.1 million tons of food waste was generated in 2018, with only 4.1 percent diverted from landfills and incinerators. Wasted food also wastes the money, time, labor, transportation, water and land to grow that food.

Additionally, decomposing food in landfills release methane gas, a climate pollutant more potent than carbon dioxide.

Fortunately, small changes can make a big difference! By following these tips, you can save money and help the environment while enjoying your holiday meals.

Plan Ahead – The easiest way to reduce food waste during the holidays is to buy and prepare the right amount of food. Try getting an accurate count of attendance for your holiday festivities.

Use Smaller Dishes – Reduce plate waste by using smaller dishes and serving spoons. Guests can always come back for seconds!

Repurpose Leftovers – Get creative and repurpose leftovers into something new. Try searching “leftover recipes” online for new ideas.

Donate Excess – Donate excess canned and dried foods to food banks and shelters. Avoid donating homemade foods and expired goods.

Compost Food Scraps – Instead of throwing out scraps, compost them! Composting keeps food out of landfills and provides valuable nutrients for your garden.

Keep fats, oils, and greases out of the drain! – Another important way to protect our environment (and your plumbing) this holiday season is to properly manage used cooking oil. If discarded down a drain like a kitchen sink, fats, oils and greases may block pipes and cause sewage backups. Instead, collect cooled cooking oils in a secure lidded container and dispose of it properly.

For more information on having a zero-waste holiday, visit cityofarcata.org or call the Environmental Services Department at (707) 822-8184.

Appeals | ‘No Substantial Issues’ raised

other, by Bayside Cares, challenged the county's CDP.

Appeal No. A-1-ARC-22-0010

Appellants of the city's CDP for improvements along a one-mile stretch of Old Arcata Road argued that the project isn't consistent with the Local Coastal Program and could impact wetlands; that the city hadn't consulted with the California Department of Fish and Wildlife (CDFW) in planning the project; that the public hadn't been properly consulted and that the project used bad information.

Coastal Commission staff considered only the first two allegations as presenting valid grounds for appeal, though neither raised substantial issues of conformance with the LCP. The other two, said staff, weren't substantive.

Citing the project's findings for approval as well as its EIR, staff affirmed the city's contention that “The project does not physically impact any wetland delineated on the City's most recent Coastal Wetlands Map. The project is in compliance with the coastal wetlands development standards of the Coastal Land Use and Development Guide.”

As for consultation with CDFW, the agency's advice was found to have been documented in the project's EIR. The alleged lack of public noticing was disproven by a record of city outreach.

Regarding use of inaccurate information, staff noted that the appeal didn't substantiate the allegation and “does not raise a substantial issue of LCP conformance.”

Appeal No. A-1-HUM-22-0026

The appellant to the county's CDP alleged lack of CDFW consultation and LCP conformance plus wetlands impacts, but also dwelt on supposed impacts from the roundabout at Old Arcata and Jacoby Creek roads, which lies partially in county territory.

The roundabout, claimed the appeal, is out of character with its surroundings and adversely affects historic and other cultural resources. Its design also, alleged the appeal, set up conditions leading to conflicts between pedestrians, bicycles and motorists. The appeal further alleged a conflict of interest on the part of a Transportation Safety Committee member.

Coastal Commission staff cited the project's EIR to find that no historic resources would be altered by the roundabout, and that “even with construction of the proposed roundabout, Bayside Corners will still largely maintain its rural feeling and setting.”

With regard to environmental impacts, staff cited findings for approval stipulating that “all potential significant impacts can be mitigated to less than significant levels with the incorporated Mitigation Monitoring and Reporting Program...” The project EIR also includes mitigation measures for potential significant impacts to aesthetics, biology, cultural resources, geology and soils, hazards and hazardous materials, transportation and tribal resources. “With implementation of these mitigation measures there are no significant and unavoidable impacts from the proposed project,” concluded staff.

As for safety, staff found nothing extraordinary about the roundabout, whose features are consistent with accepted standards. CDFW consultation was also documented.

The alleged conflict of interest was found to lie outside allowable grounds for appeal, in that it didn't include any problem's with the project's design, LCP standards or Coastal Act policies.

Discussion

Regarding the appeal of the city CDP, Coastal Commissioner and Third District Supervisor Mike Wilson moved to confirm staff's findings that no substantial issue had been identified, and the commission unanimously agreed.

On the appeal of the county CDP, attorney Chris Hamer argued on behalf of the appellants that the roundabout is non-standard, with several dangerous features that set up conditions for conflict between users. She also contended that the roundabout won't be able to properly accommodate large emergency vehicles and oversized logging vehicles.

City Engineer Netra Khatri said the roundabout incorporates standard safety features and is designed to handle the largest vehicles.

Wilson acknowledged that the Bayside Cares members do care about Bayside, as do other Bayside residents. He didn't see any Coastal Act violations, and moved to reject the appeal as lacking substantial issues. The motion passed unanimously

Planet Earth surges in voter popularity

MAD RIVER UNION

HUMBOLDT – Last Friday's update on Northern Humboldt vote counts in the Nov. 8 election saw the previous week's leading candidates solidify their victories, though one ballot measure thought rejected saw a surge in support. The Humboldt County Office of Elections continues to count votes, with updates issued weekly.

Arcata's two City Council front-runners, Meredith Matthews and Kimberley White, all but cemented their victories. Matthews gained a percentage point, going from 33.84 to 34.82 percent of the vote, while White vaulted from 31.74 to 33.39 percent.

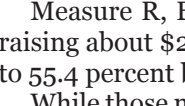

Measure L, Arcata's 3 percent tax on utility services and 45 percent tax on excessive electricity use, increased from 62.86 to 65.59 percent.

Measure P, Trinidad's increase in the tourist occupancy tax rate from 8 to 12 percent, went from 74.11 percent approval to 77.55 percent.

Measure R, Blue Lake's one percent sales tax, raising about $25,000 a year, dropped from 57.41 to 55.4 percent but maintained a 200-161 lead.

While those measures' totals remained relatively stable, Dave Meserve's “Put the Earth [flag] On Top” Measure M surged from 43.71 percent approval to 49.4 percent, closing the gap from 356 to just 54 votes. Meserve welcomed the development.

“Watching the election returns come in, and liking the current trend of votes for Measure M,” he said. “Waiting for the next report. Hoping that it passes, and we get to see the Earth flag flying at the top of City flagpoles!”

GREEN FRIDAY 350 Humboldt is teaming up with the NorthCoast Environmental Center and the Humboldt Unitarian Universalist Fellowship to offer a free “Green Friday” event for teens and young adults Friday, Dec. 2 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the HUUT, 24 Fellowship Way, Bayside. A professional local artist will lead a creative upcycling gift-making project, with snacks, music and beverages. All materials will be freely provided. There will also be opportunities to learn about the impacts of the holiday season on climate and the environment. The event provides a social opportunity for teens and young adults to “ditch the consumer craze” of the holiday season and meet other like-minded people their age. We are aware of the mental and emotional toll that the climate crisis and environmental issues are taking on young people and are currently in an effort to provide more opportunities for youth and young adults to engage meaningfully in positive action and to build a sense of community.

BLUE LAKE CASINO HOTEL

The first time I saw Genevieve, she was sitting on the side yard of Mrs. Sonntag’s house on the corner of Seventh and Union streets, her long blonde hair tied back in a pony tail, scooping out some weeds with a forked trowel. I felt for the woman for two reasons: one, the working conditions, that is, the steep slope of the hillside left over from the cut to make Union Street many years ago, and second, the job itself, a thing I simply cannot do.

My hand can hold a hammer, but it cannot dislodge a dandelion. My grandfather ruined me for that work by making me weed my childhood backyard after he moved in with us in San Diego. It was a huge (to me) backyard which had been there for who knows how many aeons of geological time, giving nature’s toughest weed species the opportunity to settle into the concrete-hard clay with re-bar caliber roots.

I hated pulling weeds with a teenager’s bottomless self-pity mingled with deep resentment towards my authoritarian grandfather whom I respected, but when he moved out, I was glad. (So were the weeds. They got a lifetime reprieve, at least from me.)

Genevieve worked for Mrs. Sonntag, my 83-year-old neighbor. The elderly lady and I shared a driveway with two other homes. Recently I had completed Mrs. Sonntag’s home, that is, the building itself, leaving the landscaping to others.

The young woman working down there, dressed in baggy clothes and sitting in a cross-legged yoga position, was, I figured, Mrs. Sonntag’s “others.” Having worked with this feisty woman for months building her house, I knew that she was perfectly capable of finding good help when she needed to after her husband passed away just after completion of the house.

My own house up the driveway was also in need of landscaping, or at least of someone who knew what they were doing in that department. That was not me. I’m not good with plants. Buildings I understand, but anything organic I leave to others.

My house is shaped in an L. The part that sticks out, the longer side of the L, is a loggia that leads to the front door. Did I say “loggia”? That’s a stretch, since there was nothing much to look at through the columns of this “loggia” although I had tried a couple of ideas.

The extension making the rest of the L, the shorter wing, is the south-facing kitchen with a great view. The carpenter who built the house decided it would be a delightful and convenient idea to put a parking space right there outside the kitchen window, completing the rectangle by filling in the open space of the L alongside the “loggia.” And wouldn’t that be the cleverest thing, so useful for getting groceries into the kitchen in the fewest number of steps? So the inventive builder did just that, paved the front yard for a parking space.

You may wonder why anybody would want to look out the window and see a work truck in his front yard at the end of the day, especially his own. To prove I agree with you, I jackhammered the slab up after a week. The next idea by the same designer (?) was to plant a lawn in the spot, a little patch about the size of a green on a “pitch and putt” golf course. I did that, or rather had it done by a pro who hauled in matts of grass and installed an irrigation system.

Of course, weeds, and I mean hungry suckers, elbowed their way up through the tender new soil in between the blades of grass in no time, flattening anything that got in their way.

And guess who appeared looking over my shoulder every time I stood at the kitchen sink doing the dishes, gazing at my weed-lawn?

“Danny, time to get the weed-ing done. Now.”

That’s right, him, the Ogre of my childhood.

In terms of beauty, the only difference between a slab of concrete in the front yard and a patch of lawn the same size is that one is green and the other is grey.

I stood next to the young lady and introduced myself. She looked up at me with one of those smiles that makes you think you’re somebody even though you don’t know why. She sprang up, the trowel dangling from her hand, and looked at me straight in the eyes, which surprised me because I figured her as a petite woman, probably due to the yoga position in which I found her.

Nothing about Genevieve was petite.

I asked her if she knew someone who might be able to help me design a garden.

“Yes!” she exclaimed, putting down the trowel. “Can I see the area?”

I had some money to spend on the project, or thought I did. My most recent business statement indicated that I had a chunk of cash which I thought was mine not realizing that it had been put aside for taxes. So I spent the whole thing on the garden. My accountant, when he found out, asked me why did I do that? By then, of course, it was too late.

Would I have spent the tax dollars on making a garden if I had known the money wasn’t mine? Well, I don’t know. I was pretty desperate to remedy my failures. And although I ended up with a debt, I also ended up with something transformational.

They say beauty is in the eye of the beholder, but I disagree. If a beholder doesn’t see the beauty that’s right there in plain view, well, why is that? We humans are not that different. We all have the same teacher.

Nature. Nature is the one thing that belongs to all of us, no matter what culture or time. Nature is the primary agent of beauty. For one thing, nature has a plan and it doesn’t lie or go wrong. It can play tricks to get us to do things for our own survival, for example, line up mates for us who don’t last.

But nature bats last, as they say and that is proved every time by the children who arrive whether from the matched or the unmatched to make the next generation. The children almost always end up being terrific offspring.

Meanwhile, nature calmly composes itself in the process of everything it creates if you give it enough time. Left alone, that is, without pesky human interference, practically every natural scene is beautiful, whether it’s the sky, the landscape, or a clearing in a forest.

When we humans try to come up with a good design, if we follow nature’s rules of composition, well we can’t go wrong by definition. The beautiful will come about. Or at least, that has been my experience in the realm of buildings, when I have followed nature’s principles (which of course, like everybody else, I often fail to do).

Over the next several weeks the former parking space/golf green got turned into Dan’s “Garden of Eden,” designed by Genevieve. Or as I prefer to call it, “Paradise Now.” All it took (after removing the lawn) was a water element (bird bath), elevation changes by making hillocks, symmetry in the location of the shrubs, a bending pathway to soften the course of the eye while walking through the garden, and one big Maple tree in front to hold back the chi from running away and leaving me bereft of all its good energy. (A mid-wife friend who was visiting from England had told me that all the chi in my house was escaping every time I opened the front door because nothing stood in its way of it getting sucked down the hill and into the bay. The maple tree fixed that problem.)

Many of the principles of beauty found in garden design, I believe, are the same ones found in building design: symmetry, replication, careful attention to details, balance, elevation changes for the eye, plenty of exposure to sunlight where needed, variation created by shadowing (tree limbs and leaf shapes in gardening) and many others.

Long ago when the planet was warming after the ice age, the hunter/gatherer peoples who came down from the north into the Fertile Crescent found what must have seemed to them a bounty beyond belief: rivers full of fish, forests full of game, meadows full of wild grains, flocks of birds filling the skies.

It is no wonder than this period has been deemed the Garden of Eden, for it truly was a paradise of the natural world.

Over time, the Natufian peoples settled in the area and planted grains (wheat and barley) to supplement the wild varieties of grasses which they could gather. Significantly, the Natufians also were the first culture to make permanent dwellings in which they could store their extra food for future supplies, indicating that they weren’t planning to move.

The first sedentary villages appeared during this era. The simple life of the Natufian Culture in cooperation with nature was a natural solution to the insecurities of the migratory life they had lived during the Stone Age.

Though many today romanticize Nature, we cannot repeat the Age of Innocence. But we have our gardens to recreate, at least symbolically, something like what the Natufian Culture made in their world.

Several years after the garden Genevieve made for me had reached maturity, she remarked that a garden is the transition between one’s house and nature. She is right. And since all three realms follow the same principles, we don’t have to look far to see the extraordinary beauty emerging in each of the realms, whether in the house, the garden, or in nature.

One could even say that beauty is the thread that binds them all together, weaving its way along and making everything better.

There's only you and me and we just disagree

No Earth disrespect

The headline in another paper read “Voters strongly oppose Prop M.” That’s the Earth flag atop the flagpole initiative. I want to emphasize the same thing proponents said in these very pages. Because the American flag would be below the Earth flag in their scenario, it doesn’t mean disrespect to the American flag. Conversely, the Earth being second, or even third below the state flag as Prop M decided, doesn’t imply disrespect for the Earth at all. Unpopular idea, perhaps, but no disrespect to the Earth.

Benefits of single-payer, Medicare for All

My name is Winchell Dillenbeck and I am a member of Health Care for All and Physicians for a National Health Program, a nonprofit statewide organization. Our mission is dedicated to achieving universal health care through single-payer public financing. Our goal is for all California residents to have guaranteed, high quality, comprehensive health care. A single-payer financing system has succeeded in countries throughout the developed world. People in these countries have better health and enjoy a lifestyle free of anxiety and worry about how to pay for a health crisis. All of this is accomplished at a lower cost to the people and businesses. The cost of health care in America is twice that of Western developed nations. Our dysfunctional health care system is damaging our economy, suffocating our business, discouraging physicians and negatively impacting on the nation’s health while remaining unaffordable for a large portion of our citizens.

- The key features of a Single-Payer/Medicare for All system include:
- Universal Coverage
 - Everyone, no matter their age and ethnicity, is covered for life, regardless of their employment status, income level, health condition, marital status, or immigration status.
 - Single-Payer
 - One public agency vs. numerous insurance companies.
 - Comprehensive Care

- Eliminate deductibles and co-payments.
- Saves money by negotiating prices for services, drugs, and medical supplies.
- Eliminates the employer-based health care system

Gateway needs more coordination

- The Arcata Gateway project is the undemocratic process ever! Why do the city and planners wait to tell us at the very last minute that they are holding a meeting to let the developers build bigger if they want to? Who is working for whom here?
- The city needs a spokesperson for the community via newspapers, social media, email, Nextdoor, library postings, for example. Councilmember Alex Stillman knows the community, she loves Arcata and is probably the most outspoken and supportive person to help obtain these community benefits. She shouldn't have to recuse herself from the process, because Arcata needs her to explain. I believe she doesn't have to vote.
- Stephanie McGearry wrote in the Lost Coast Outpost Nov. 15: “...The idea is that the [Gateway project] benefits program would be tiered, so that if a developer offered more community benefits, they would be allowed to build taller and higher-density buildings.” (underlining mine)
- Since the city is going to have to build and build and build to service Cal Poly Humboldt's increase of new students and

- staff, then they need to coordinate — with Cal Poly H., the county and state grants, bonds, special elections—the “community benefits” and infrastructure to support businesses, services and SAFETY: library, arts and theatre, parks, transportation, parking, water, sewer, garbage, recycling, healthcare, childcare, schools, roads.
- The CITY must decide the amount to shelter the homeless and low income, otherwise the developers are going to hold the city hostage. The CITY and the Coastal Commission need to play offense, not defense, to the developers, because I see the developers, if left to their own devices, will not provide what Arcata, and indeed the county, needs, only their own, which is unsustainable environmentally and socially.
- Sincerely,
Kate Hitt, president, Friends of the Arcata Library

Polls and projections

- I have often believed that political polls should be outlawed or at the least restricted. Use of polls causes anxiety in otherwise sane individuals, no matter their political ideology. With this in mind I went to bed Tuesday night with heightened anxiety as to what the next day would bring.
- On Nov. 9, after watching the latest returns from all the talking heads, my anxiety subsided and I found I could be happy again. Then I thought this is really stupid.
- The other thing I never truly understood is why in the world ANYONE would discuss how they voted coming out of a polling station. Voting is private. It is one of the truly unique freedoms we still enjoy. So why would you tell anyone who, just asked? And how do the people who ask know you are telling them the truth.
- The problem with polls and focus groups is that they are never anonymous and never without purpose. There is no way to gather a group of people to interview without revealing what you are trying to accomplish. That is the problem with Statistics. While statistics might be useful in hard sciences it is next to impossible in the Liberal Arts.
- On two separate occasions I have proven to so called “statistical experts” that by the use of language you can skew any result. I asked them what outcome was desirable and was able to produce the wanted results. Why should we pay any attention to polls?
- Projections fare no better. Again, supposedly, voters tell random strangers how they plan to vote and voted as they exit the polls – called exit polls. They can study trends to their hearts content and still not get it right. That is what happened this election cycle.
- Leave the states alone. All the states have to do is to certify their vote counts by whatever date is decided by the state. In California counties have until 31 days after a vote is taken to submit certified vote counts to the Secretary of State. The Sec- retary of State’s office usually has 1 week to certify the election counts. That is it. It happens differently in each state and is no one’s business except the individual state.

- In the aftermath some interesting tidbits:
 - The Lincoln Project is a group of ex-Republicans and Democrats who came together with the express mission to destroy Donald Trump and keep him out of office. I have watched it from afar and like all PACs who raise large sums of money they have recently had a financial fubar. That being said, on the day after the election Mark McKinnon, an outspoken member of this organization, stated that the new goal of the Lincoln Project is to destroy the Republican Party.
 - Is it redundant to say that the GOP is doing a great job of destroying the party on its own? However, every pressure that can be brought to bear will be better for the country.
 - Goodbye Nancy
 - The party and the country have lost one of the most effective House Speakers ever. Her replacement, whoever that is, will be hard pressed to accomplish anything of merit without a guiding hand like Nancy Pelosi’s. And the supposed progressive, left-wing part of the democrats have gotten their wish. Just remember, “be careful what you wish for”.
 - Thank you for listening,
Jan Phelps

Avoid holiday tragedy

- The holiday season comes with family gatherings, social time with friends, and office parties. These joyful events can lead to life-altering consequences, like drunken driving.
- When I was 16 years old in 1992, a drunken driver hit me. I had a four month coma, broken bones, paralysis and brain injuries. My gait and speech are affected and I lost my driving and hearing abilities. For 30+ years, I read lips and cannot enjoy holiday music due to my brain injury. Drunken drivers injure lives many ways.
- Planning to take U.S. 101 to attend a holiday gathering? Make smart decisions now if planning to drink: Don't drive drunk. The law enforcement and I urge you to have a sober friend, taxi, etc. drive you to and from this location. This ensures everyone's safety on the road, including yours.
- My message to drive sober will never get old because it saves lives. Having a sober driver is a superb way to begin 2023. Happy Holidays.

His upbringing at the Maxfield Home orphanage in Kingston and being albino in Jamaica were two obstacles the he overcame and went on to be (at one time) the biggest reggae artist since Bob Marley. The rudest Dance-hall toaster of the 1980s, Jamaica’s albino son Yellowman made as many enemies as fans with his controversial lyrics. Now back on the scene, singing at a slightly slower pace, Yellowman’s witticisms are as cheeky, spirited and intelligent as ever, and delivered with his customary sharp, melodic style. Doors open at 7 p.m., show starts at 8 p.m. All ages. Tickets are $20 and are available by visiting arcatatheatrelounge.com. For more information, call (707) 630-5000.

Legendary Boise-based indie rock band Built to Spill is centered around lead vocalist and guitarist Doug Martsch, the only permanent member, Built to Spill has released eight full-length albums since its inception. Martsch originally envisioned the band to feature a changing set of backing musicians for each album, but eventually settled with a stable lineup for over a decade before returning to his original plan in 2012. Having received consistent critical acclaim throughout their career, three of the band’s albums — There’s Nothing Wrong with Love, Perfect from Now On and Keep It Like a Secret — placed in the top 50 of Pitchfork’s Top 100 Albums of the 1990s list. Doors open at 8 p.m., show starts at 9 p.m. 21+ ages. Tickets are $34 and are available by visiting arcatatheatrelounge.com. For more information, call (707) 630-5000.
